

By the Lords Iustices and Councell.

Adam Loftus Canc. R Corke.

DRASMUCH as wee obserue that the going forth of Souldiers (to Collect the Monyes due by vertue of such assignments as haue beene heretofore made of his Maiesties Rents and Reuenews, as well to severall Companies of the Armie as to sundry particular Persons for their payment) falls out to be extreemely burdensome to the Countrey, in that many in all partes doe suffer by the outrage and violence of the Souldier, who haue beene no way faultie in their payments: wee therefore being desirous to provide for the ease and good of the Countrey, haue purposed to settle such a course herein for the future, as the punishments for backwardnesse in payment may light onely on the defaulters themselves: In pursuance whereof wee hereby in his Maiesties name straightly charge and command, That all Souldiers now lying on any Persons or Countrey for defaults in that kinde, doe presently returne vnto their Garrisons, and there continue, And that on perill of their liues they commit no extortion or oppression on the Subjects in their returnes, And doe hereby likewise straightly charge and commaund, That the chiefe Officer of euery Horse, or Foote-Company, to whom any assignments haue beene made of Monyes, still remayning due to them, may authorize some one or two whom they shall thinke fit to attend his Maiesties Court of Exchequer for releefe, where such course will be taken to compell payment to be made vnto them with costs and damages as shall be fit, which course also all particular persons may take, and they may receiue the like releefe thereby.
